SCHOOL-BASED LAW ENFORCEMENT SUMMIT

Harlingen Police Chief Jeffrey Adickes addresses law enforcement officers on police leadership

The Texas State School Safety Center has selected Harlingen, Texas as their venue for next year's School-Based Law Enforcement Summit. The summit focuses upon school related topics such as: Building a Positive School Climate (Anti-Bullying), Border Issues, Gang Intervention, Inappropriate Relationships, Juvenile Law & SBLE Updates, Mental Health Expansion, Plain Clothes Response to Violent Encounters, and Special Education. The goal of the summit is to provide officers with best practices in campus-based law enforcement and community policing, as well as in crime detection and prevention.

"The Institute for Criminal Justice Studies from the Texas School Safety Center is very excited in coming to Harlingen for four days of training in the summer of 2016. The facility at Cano Freshman Campus has the integrated technology and venue we are looking for this type of training." Says Joe Munoz, ICJS Manager.

Harlingen Police Chief Jeff Adickes was a guest speaker at today's Summit in McAllen where he led a presentation on leadership. The summit is expected to draw over 200 law enforcement officers from around the region.
